Cheerfulness will attract more customers sell more goods, do more business with less wear and tear than almost any other quality, says Orison Sweet Marden, in Success Magazine. Optimism is the greatest business getter, biggest trader, the greatest achiever in the world. Pessimism has never done anything but tear down and destroy what optimism has built up. In the business office, as in society everywhere, the favorite is always the cheerful person. Good natured, cheerful people do not waste their vital energy as rapidly as the grumbler or the too sober, too sad people. They work with much less friction.

Dear friends—We, your friends and neighbors of Colebrook and vicinity, have met here tonight in a social gathering to express our regret for your departure from among us. We ask you to accept these small tokens as a remembrance.

THE FRUITS OF CREEDS

The Creed to Cherish Is That Which Gives Strength for Worthy Living

"I will show thee my faith by my works."—James ii., 18.

That which is true of men is true also of their creeds in at least one respect—they must be known by their fruits, by the effects which they produce. The final test of a creed is not whether it remains in precisely the form in which it was held by those who claimed for it a special revelation, but whether it is producing worthy results to-day.

How much better is our day for the creeds proclaimed to it? What effects are coming from the defense of the faith so far as the problems of human misery and need are concerned? The solemn words have been recited and their significances expounded for many a thousand Sundays from many a pulpit. Is life richer, sweeter, kindlier? Are men juster? Is the hypocrite hated and the oppressor cast down as a result.

The creeds have shed more blood and cost more human treasure than any other modern motive or cause. They must justify themselves in the life of to-day. Unless some one shall show us the vast human importance of knowing exactly the intricacies of ancient and subtle philosophies we may learn to ignore them all and with the business of trying to make this a better world to live in.

It is easy for many in sonorous tones to recite their faith, with nice attention to the least syllable and with a sense of valiant willingness to defend its last iota and then to go out and grind down the face of the poor, make themselves strong out of the weakness of others, and turn the heart of a devil to the appeals of common humanity.

The trouble with such confessions of religion is that they have not enough contact with real living, not enough concern about real things to make a man feel their bearing on his life. They are guilty of limitation to speculations and analysis of the Deity instead of indicating conduct, inspiring to right relations and noble doing of duty in and amongst humanity.

The market and the shop are the places where the real creed is written; all the rest, spoken, sung, or printed, may be but empty words. A man's actual beliefs are wrought out in the stress of life. He may take the name of the Most High on his lips with accents of reverence and yet demonstrate by his dark creed that he believes only in the worth and power of the devil.

As we lay our hands on one another, as we mark our ways through life, as we leave the impress of ourselves on others, we are writing our real creeds. High heaven laughs at our foolish mouthings of words and watches the way we go and the works we do, for these prove the springs of our lives, these reveal the things we deeply, truly believe.

If a man says, "I believe in God the Father," then he will surely live as one who knows that he is that the universe is a home and not a jungle; that in the end truth and right and goodness must prevail; that the only way of living is that which brings us all up closer to the face and glory of that which we call God.

It would be a good thing to turn from looking back over our creeds to make sure of their foundations—to take a good, long, clear look to make sure of their fruitage. Have they any effect on my life? If they have not they are drying up the very heart within me every time I utter empty words.

Ask, if there is any good in me, to what creed is it due? To that which I repeat in the name of religion or to that which I am working out through life's lessons? What are the things I cherish most? What is the purpose of all my striving? Where lie the deep springs of conduct? To answer such questions is to uncover our dominant beliefs.

The creed to cherish is that which impels to the realization of our best at any cost, that which bears the fruits of godlike kindness, love, and hope for all our fellows; that which best helps us to make true, present, and actual the dreams and passions that lay behind the ancient words of faith and bring to pass the good of all our great family here.

HENRY F. COPE.

so much so that Luke says he had built, out of love for the nation, a Jewish synagogue.

6. My servant—In this case a term of affection, throwing light upon the kindness of the centurion, and indicating his high regard for the stricken slave.

The palsy—Known now as paralysis, a wasting of muscular motor power, due to disease of the brain or nervous centers.

Grievously tormented—A feature of the case mentioned only by Matthew, and, perhaps, having no medical significance. Some think it refers to the muscular spasms and difficult breathing accompanying progressive paralysis.

8. I am not worthy—Luke represents the centurion as sending elders of the Jews who seek the help self to the prevalent ideas on this subject, but he did not share them.

17. Horace Bushnell made this verse the root idea of his conception of the redeeming work of our Lord. By taking our burdens upon his feelings, in sympathy, he bears them for us.

HIS MAJESTY WON'T STAND FOR HIGH PRICES.

Purveyors to the King are Only Allowed 10 Per Cent Profit.

The people of this continent who are striking against high food prices little know, probably, that they have a precedent for their revolt in the action of a man who holds one of the most exalted positions in the world. The strike against prices was begun by the King of England. But Edward VII. restricted his efforts to his own needs. He stood out, made stringent rules, and he won. The tradesmen were angry, but they had to accept or cease to be "Purveyors to the King."

LIMIT IS TEN PER CENT.

It may hardly be credible, but it is the fact that while the struggling citizens of America are being forced to pay exorbitant profits on the necessities of life the King of England permits none of his tradesmen to charge him more than allows them a profit of 10 per cent. They can like it or leave it, but those are his terms.

In the days of her Majesty Queen Victoria the royal traders had an easy time. And they made hay while their sun shone. They little dreamed, though, of the severe day of reckoning that was coming.

One illustration is sufficient to show how the venerable Queen was made to fulfil the line of Kipling's famous war poem, which no one in England ever likes to have recalled now. "Pay, pay, pay!" All other cases were the same as this one.

The distance from the railroad station to the castle at Windsor is less than half a mile. The hill to the castle is rather steep, so most of the hotel carriages have two horses. The fare for such a vehicle is half a dollar. For the ordinary one-horse cab the fare is only 25 cents. The charges to her Majesty when she ordered a carriage from a hotel to bring a guest from the station to the castle was $2.50.

KING CUT DOWN THE FARES.

Edward VII. allows instead of $2.50 just 81 cents. He says that is too much, but allows the extra few cents because he insists on the hotel keeping horses such as his Master of the Horse will pass as respectable looking, and maintaining a stable of them all the year round, whether they are wanted or not.

What Edward VII. thinks about some of the hotel horses is like unto a Sunday school good conduct ticket compared with what some of the hotel proprietors think of Edward VII.

But many an old, long standing account has the King paid off by means of his savings out of the tradesmen since he has been in a

A MAKER OF BIG GUNS

PERSONAL SKETCH OF SIR ANDREW NOBLE.

Great Establishment at Elswick, England, Where Guns and Warships are Built.

No living man knows more about guns and explosives than Sir Andrew Noble, who has lately been awarded, with the approval of the Prince of Wales, the Albert Medal of the Royal Society. He is chairman of Armstrong, Whitworth, and Company, whose great works stand at Elswick, on the upper side of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, says Pearson's Weekly.

Elswick has a hand in almost every department of the steel industry, but its specialties are big guns and warships. It has built the greater part of the Japanese Navy. Forty thousand pounds is distributed there every week in wages among 25,000 men. Some hundred thousand of the population of Newcastle are more or less dependent on Elswick. It has a river frontage a mile and a half long, and a hundred and fifty separate workshops. It has even a children's school.

BORN AT GREENOCK.

The ordnance department, in which Sir Andrew Noble won his fame, covers over forty acres, and employs 15,000 of the men. Work goes on there day and night.

Born at Greenock, Scotland, seventy-seven years ago, the son of a naval officer and of an American mother, Sir Andrew soon became a Captain in the Royal Artillery, and an enthusiastic student of everything relating to cannons.

When the great struggle between cannon and armor plating began, the Government appointed, in 1859, a committee of inquiry, with Captain Noble as a member. In the same year, so rapidly had he come to the front, he was made Assistant-Inspector of Artillery.

It was in 1860 that he began his famous partnership with the late Lord Armstrong, who thirteen years before had abandoned the quieter paths of the law and founded a small factory at Elswick.

In 1860 he had just added an ordnance department, and saw that the brilliant young artillery officer was the man he wanted. The two worked together for forty years, while the factory grew from small things to become one of the biggest industrial establishments in the world.

Sir Andrew Noble was largely responsible for the change from iron to steel as a material for big guns. Something better was needed than the heavy bronze and cast-iron cannon that had been doing duty at Sebastopol. In a few years Noble had left them miles behind and revolutionized the science of cannon-building.

HOW BIG GUNS ARE BUILT.

This is how big guns are built at Elswick: Red-hot steel ingots are forced into a rough cylindrical shape, either by the pounding of steam-hammers (some of them can give a blow of 700 tons), or by hydraulic presses. The largest of the latter gives a pressure of nearly 5,000 tons.

Now that the rough forging has been made it has to be tested, and Verse 2. A leper—Leprosy is supposed to be due to improper food and unclean surroundings. It is not hereditary, and is contagious only from close personal contact. It reduces the victim to terrible emaciation. The Jews treated lepers as outcasts and pronounced over them the burial service. The disease is considered incurable, though much may be done to alleviate it.

Came to him—Violating legal restrictions, he entered the city where Jesus was.

Worshiped him—Reverence paid to kings. The fame of Jesus had spread far and wide.

Lord—A courteous form of address to one considered of superior authority; implying here, perhaps, a belief in the Messiahship of Jesus.

If thou wilt—He had no doubt of the power of Jesus, but hesitated to believe he would condescend to do anything for an unclean outcast.

Thou canst make me clean—Leprosy is spoken of in the Gospels not as being "healed" but "cleansed." This was partly because the decaying flesh was made sweet again and the skin white, partly because it meant restoration of ceremonial cleanness and return to the worship of God.

Touched him—Contemporary rabbis would have driven him out or hidden their faces. It was considered unsafe to come within six feet of a leper. To touch one was to become polluted before the law. The supremacy of Jesus is seen in the fact that not only did he not become defiled, but he was able instantly to pronounce the leper cleansed.

See thou tell no man—Apparently the miracle was performed within doors (Mark 1. 43). Secrecy was possible if the man could be kept still. It was desirable, because (1) Jesus had usurped the priest's right to declare a leper clean, and (2) because he deprecated the gathering of a crowd such as that which had impelled him to leave Capernaum shortly before.

Show thyself to the priest—In that way the leper could be showing respect to authority, and would relieve Jesus of suspicions of interfering with the course of law.

The gift that Moses commanded—Two he-lambs without blemish, and one ewe lamb of the first year without blemish.

A testimony unto them—A proof that the cure was genuine. After due examination the priests would accept his gift, thus acknowledging the cure. Of course Jesus did not contemplate the disclosure to the priests of the manner of the cure. The fact that the leper disclosed his ignorance helps to account for the question Jesus had to meet later (Matt. 9. 3, 34).

He was entered into Capernaum—Events following the leper's publication of his story were as Jesus had feared. The gaping multitudes crowded around him, forcing him into the desert places, and even there he was unable to escape. His tour of Galilee therefore came to an abrupt close, and he returned home.

Centurion—A Roman officer, in charge of one hundred men of a legion, probably under Herod Antipas. All the centurions of the New Testament seem to have been worthy men. This one had regard for the Jewish faith and customs of nervous centers.

Grievously tormented—A feature of the case mentioned only by Matthew, and, perhaps, having no medical significance. Some think it refers to the muscular spasms and difficult breathing accompanying progressive paralysis.

I am not worthy—Luke represents the centurion as sending elders of the Jews, who seek the help of the Great Healer on the ground that he is worthy. A second embassy intercepts Jesus on the road and protests that the centurion, as here, feels his entire unworthiness. He remembered that he was a Gentile, and that for Jesus to come under his roof was for him to be defiled (John 15. 25).

Only say the word—The first evidence of the man's great faith in Jesus. This distinguishes the case of the centurion from that of the nobleman in John 4. 46, who insisted that Jesus go to his house.

I also am a man under authority—He compares the authority of Jesus to that given to him. In each case it was an authority derived from a supreme source, and also absolute. He is not contrasting his case with that of Jesus, but declaring that their cases are similar. When they say Go and Come, they do so under the limitations imposed upon them by a higher authority.

He marveled—Partly because this great display of faith was on the part of a Gentile, and even in Israel he had found nothing like it. His sense of unworthiness, his confidence in the mere word of Jesus, his belief in Jesus's control of unseen powers, all were remarkable. But they had parallels in Israel. The great thing was the common recognition of the conditions under which Jesus labored. He came "to do the will of him that sent" him. His word, therefore, is the word of the supreme Spiritual Authority. When we obey it we are like the soldiers who looked beyond the word of the centurion to the will of the emperor.

From the east and the west—Gentiles. Jesus here makes use of the favorite image of the Messiahism being ushered in by a great feast. The rabbis taught that all Israelites were to recline (sit down) at the table together. Patriarchs, prophets, heroes would all be included, and the Gentiles shut out. Jesus startlingly reverses the order, promising that men like the centurion from every nation shall enjoy the Messianic feast, and the sons of the kingdom (12), who have sold their spiritual birthright, shall experience the terrible realities (of disappointment and anger) expressed in the lurid figurative language of outer darkness, weeping, and gnashing of teeth.

Peter's house—This he and his wife shared with her mother and his brother Andrew. Jesus seems to have made it an abiding place while in Capernaum.

Fever—The malarial variety common on the shores of the sea.

Ministered—Her attending to the table, and so on, was evidence that the fever had left her and no weakness remained.

Possessed with demons—It was believed that all sorts of ills were traceable to the work of evil spirits. The worst forms of possession were those of insanity and epilepsy. "With gracious condescension" Jesus accommodated himof not.

What Edward VII. thinks about some of the hotel horses is like unto a Sunday school good conduct ticket compared with what some of the hotel proprietors think of Edward VII.

But many an old, long standing account has the King paid off by means of his savings' out of the tradesmen since he has been in a position to pay cash.

There is in England a great desire to supply the King. It is one of the best possible forms of advertisement. His Majesty makes the tradesmen pay for it. A royal order is always given on large and beautiful specially engraved paper. But previously the tradesman is granted a "Royal Warrant," which is something to frame and preserve as an heirloom. That enables him to put the royal coat of arms up over his store window—and everybody else rushes in, since what the King buys must necessarily be the best.

Sir Thomas Lipton often admits that what revolutionized his business and converted it from a supply department to the poorest of the poor into a supply department to the richest of the rich as well, was the sale of some tea for Windsor Castle arranged for him by Mrs. George Keppel through the Marchioness of Breadalbane.

GUARD ROYAL WARRANT.

Those who possess the royal warrant form the Royal Warrant Holders' Association, and that body takes very good care that no one not entitled to display the royal insignia shall have it over his store.

But his Majesty has a schedule of profits. It was drawn up actually by himself, for no Lord Chamberlain, nor anybody in the Lord Chamberlain's department, was capable of doing it. In that schedule is the amount of profit to be permitted to every class of tradesman. On groceries the profit allowed is only 5 per cent. On meat it is 10 per cent. His Majesty held that the grocer could keep his supplies without deterioration if they were not sold, but the butcher could not, and so required the higher profit.

Ten per cent. is, however, the limit. The jewellers waited on the Lord Chamberlain and protested that they had so few customers, compared with the butcher and the vegetable dealer, they were bound to have at least 30 per cent.

"Not from me," the King is reported to have said when the Lord Chamberlain urged the petition of the jewellers. And they didn't. Ten per cent. is all they get.

MUST SHOW BILLS.

His Majesty takes care to see that his ten per cent. is only ten per cent. Whenever a bill is presented for payment, the tradesman has to produce with it his own wholesale bills. The price that goes on the royal bill has to be only just so much more than what the tradesman has paid himself as the rate on the profit schedule allows. If the butcher has paid twenty cents a pound for his prime American, Liverpool-killed beef, he can charge the royal household twenty-two cents a pound and not a fraction more on his life, although in London the price is probably twenty-eight cents a pound to other consumers.

A staff of checkers is kept to see that there is no collusion between the wholesaler and the retailer.

This is how big guns are built at Elswick: Red-hot steel ingots are forced into a rough cylindrical shape, either by the pounding of steam-hammers (some of them can give a blow of 700 tons), or by hydraulic presses. The largest of the latter gives a pressure of nearly 3,000 tons.

Now that the rough forging has been made it has to be tested, and this is a critical part of the process. A few pieces are cut off from the main forging, heated in oil at a temperature of about 1,500 degrees Fahrenheit, and fixed firmly in iron jaws. Hydraulic pressure now tries to tear each lump in two, the strain sometimes rising to 46 tons on each square inch. If all the sample pieces stand the test the forging is held good enough to make a gun. If not, another forging is made.

If the test is satisfactory, the rough pillar of steel is now "rough-bored" inside and "turned" on the outside. Then it is hardened by being dipped into a bath of hot oil; then bored and turned again till smooth; then annealed, or allowed to cool slowly from a high temperature; then it is "fine-bored" and "fine-turned." The next process is that of testing the surface. It is tested both chemically and by mirrors.

GROOVED LIKE A SCREW.

The gun is now well into shape, but it needs strengthening. A deep pit is dug, and the gun set upright in it. Red-hot hoops of steel are dropped on from on top. As they cool they tighten. After each layer of hoops the gun is planed by a lathe to make it smooth for the next layer. Now the inside is rifled or grooved like a screw. When the powder-chamber has been bored out and the breech-block fitted, the gun is nearly ready for its trials. The Elswick big guns are tested near Silloth, on the flat and lonely shores of the Solway Firth.

Many are the inventions that the artillery world owes Sir Andrew Noble. The debt might be summed up in this: Sir Andrew was the first man to apply scientific methods or research to gun-making, which had hitherto been largely a rule-of-thumb affair.

One of his most ingenious inventions, however, is the chronoscope, which measures the speed of a shot at different parts of the bore of a gun. "Cutting plugs," passing through the circumference of the gun to the bore, are screwed into the sides of the gun. As the shot passes its foremost edge presses up a knife which cuts a wire. This intercepts an electric current, and the instrument thus makes the record.

FOND OF SHOOTING.

He has, too, after exhaustive research, published a valuable table by which the heat and the gasses produced by any change in any gun can be calculated and analysed.

Sir Andrew is very fond of shooting and of tennis. When young he was a noted athlete. His home is in the heart of Jesmond Dene, the most beautiful public park in England. Honors have been showered on him for his services to science. He has been decorated by seven foreign Governments.

The man who gives his business proper attention has but little time for side issues.

GRIM RUSSIAN PRISON.

A Living Death the Lot of the Inmates of the Schlüsselburg.

In the middle of the River Neva, where it flows out of Lake Ladoga, there lies a tiny island surrounded on three sides by the turbulent waters of the river and hemmed in upon the fourth by the cold and stormy lake. Upon this island stands a very ancient fortress enclosed by high walls more than twenty feet in thickness. This is the fortress of Schlüsselburg.

Day and night sentinels relieved every two hours pace around the top of these walls, keeping vigilant lookout on every hand. No one from within the fortress, not even the soldiers or gendarmes, is allowed to communicate with the people who dwell upon the banks of the river. If the unwary fisherman chances to drift in his boat too near the walls of the fortress, says McClure's, he is greeted by the shout of a sentinel, aiming his rifle:

"Away! Or I shoot!"

Not even the Dead Sea in the deserts of Asia is so utterly isolated and cut off from the living world as is this fortress of Schlüsselburg, which lies within forty miles of St. Petersburg.

They are very ancient, the high walls of the fortress. In many places they are cracked from old age, and in the cracks little trees have taken root. They look sullen and ominously silent, as if they hid dark and gruesome secrets. And in truth in the whole world there are no other walls that have witnessed so many tragedies as those of the fortress of Schlüsselburg.

The regime and the aspect of the prison were carefully thought out and planned, being, as the Ministers visiting the Schlüsselburg repeatedly declared to the prisoners, intended to demonstrate to them that it was destined to be their grave. The cells were constructed in such a manner as constantly to remind the prisoners of a tomb. The stone floors were painted black and the walls dark gray.

The window panes were opaque, so that no ray of sun ever penetrated within the cells and no trace of color from without could be caught by the prisoners. The iron bedstead was turned up by day and chained against the wall, and only a little stool, also fastened in its place, allowed the prisoners an occasional rest from the incessant stride backward and forward across the floor of the cell.

This pacing back and forth was in fact the only diversion permitted to the prisoners. No books were given to them except the Bible, which they had already learned from cover to cover in the fortress of Saints Peter and Paul, no work for their hands, no color for their eyes, no sound for their ears.

Cut off from the living world, buried in the black stone cells, clothed in the dingy prison garb, with one sleeve black, the other yellow, they strode to and fro from corner to corner of their cages. Their food was abominable: bread, half raw, made of rotten flour, and a plate of hot water in which floated a few shreds of meat or the traces of an onion.

THE REGIMENTAL COLORS

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE FEW YARDS OF SILK.

British Soldiers Have at All Times Been Ready to Lay Down Their Lives for It.

The regiment is swinging down the street; in the centre of a long column of men in "fours" may be seen flying the colors, for whatever the formation, whether the regiment be drawn up in line, or in column on parade, or on the march, the colors must always be in the centre.

They are carried by two subaltern officers, each wearing a special belt fitted with a socket in which the pole or staff of the color rests when borne aloft, the color at other times being carried across the shoulder, and the officers and their precious burdens are guarded by a small party of picked N.C.O.'s—color sergeants.

Mayhap there are some in the crowd to whom the colors make no appeal, who even sneer at them, as they would at anything that stirs the heart and one's patriotism, but no manly man can look upon the colors without some thrill of honest emotion.

True, the colors are no longer taken on active service, for the veneration with which they were regarded, the vital necessity of guarding them at all costs, often led to heroic, but in a sense

UNNECESSARY WASTE OF LIFE

And so now-a-days when a regiment goes on active service the colors are deposited in the cathedral or other suitable public building of the capital of the regiment's county, or of the city or town where it has its regimental depot.

None the less, the spirit of the colors goes with the regiment, and to see them flying in time of peace is to think instinctively of deeds of daring-do. So as the regiment swings past you will see most men in the crowd touch or raise their hats, some because they know that the colors (when uncased) should always be saluted; others just because of that instinctive feeling of pride in and reverence for the emblems of our King, our soldiers, and our country.

Volumes could be written on the desperate adventures and heroic deeds that hinge around the colors, but there is no tale perhaps more dramatic than that of the colors of the 24th Regiment which were cut to pieces at Isandula, in the Zulu War.

The colors that day were borne by Lieutenants Melville and Coghill, and when all was lost save honor, the gallant officers, who in no other circumstances would have turned their backs to a foe, tore the colors from their staffs, wrapped them round their bodies under their tunics, and fled from the field in a desperate attempt to SAVE THE PRECIOUS FLAGS.

Alas! they were overtaken and assailed to death in the bed of a river, where later a search party, headed by Captain Winsome Black (now General Winsome Black, C.B.) found them with the colors, torn, pierced and bloody, but safe, and brought them and the bodies of

TWO SECRETS.

Eben Hid His From His Wife, and She Cherished Her Own.

"How's business, Eben?" The old man was washing at the sink after his day's work.

"Fine, Marthy; fine!"

"Does the store look just the same, with the red geranium in the window? Land, how I'd like to see it with the sun shining in! How does it look, Eben?"

Eben did not answer for a moment. When he did his voice shook a bit.

"The store's never been the same since you left, Marthy."

A faint little flush came into Marthy's withered cheek. Is a wife ever too old to be moved by her husband's flattery?

For years Eben and Martha had kept a tiny notion store. Then Martha fell sick and was taken to the hospital. That was months ago. She was out now, but she would never be strong again—never be partner in their happy little trade again.

"I can't get over a haubering for a sight of the store," thought Martha one forenoon. "If I take it real careful I can get down there. 'Tisn't so far. Eben 'll scold, but he'll be tickled most to death."

It took a long time for her to drag herself downtown, but at last she stood at the head of the little street where the store was. All of a sudden she stopped. Ahead, on the pavement, stood Eben. A tray hung from his neck, on which were arranged a few cards of collar studs, some papers of pins and shoe leces. Two or three holders were in his shaking old hand, and as he stood he called his wares.

Martha clutched at the wall of the building. She looked over the way at the little store. Its windows were filled with fruit, and an Italian name fluttered on the awning. Then Martha understood. The store had gone to pay her expenses. She turned and hurried away as fast as her trembling limbs would take her.

"It will hurt him so to have me find out," she thought, and the tears trickled down her face.

"He's kept a secret from me, and I'll keep one from him," she said to herself. "He shan't know that I know."

That night when Eben came in, chilled and weary, Martha asked cheerfully the old question:

"How's business?"

"Better'n ever, Marthy," answered Eben.

A Lack of Language.

A lamentable gap in the English language and indeed in all languages has been discovered by a correspondent of The London Lancet. "Why," asks M. J. Williams, "is there no way of describing smells? You have not described or classified a smell when you have said that it is horrid, and you are just as wide of the mark when you have said another smell is lovely. Consider the parallel of the classification of colors. When you describe a sunset you need not merely say that it is beautiful. You can go further and say that it is red or yellow or purple, as the case may be. But supposing you have been face to face with musk for a few minutes and want to describe it to your friends. You will find that outside the province of expletives, you are helpless."

Sail-Bearing Fishes.

Various marine animals possess organs which, raised above the surface, act as sails, by means of which they are propelled along the water. Among these may be mentioned the Portuguese man-of-war and the paper nautilus. Certain fishes, it appears, use the same method of progression, the dorsal fin acting as a sail. Broussonet called such fishes Poissons voiliers. And the scientific name histiophorus (sail bearer), given to a genus of fish, implies a similar belief. In a contribution to the zoologi-

COBALT'S GREAT RIVAL

BROKEN HILL, N.S.W., CLAIMS TO BE BIGGEST CAMP.

Famous Silver Area Which Has Yielded $200,000,000 Since Its Beginning Dates Its Start From a Deal Involving a Dozen Eggs, Many of Which Were Bad—One Which Pays $100,000,000 in Dividends.

Hatched from a dozen eggs, eggs that was the beginning of Broken Hill, the great silver camp of New South Wales, called the world's greatest silver camp in fact, although Cobalt seems to be usurping the title. This is how it came about: One day in 1864, when the first of the Broken Hill mines was still a discouraging prospect, a man drifted that way, looked over the ground and made up his mind that there would soon be other stragglers along and that these would want to eat. So he hunted up the prospectors and offered them a dozen eggs for a monopoly of the restaurant privileges on their lease. Eggs were as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth in that section of the bush country and the offer was hungrily accepted. Thus was the commercial life of Broken Hill inaugurated and never was there a worse beginning. Nine of the eggs were gone past all hope of redemption and the other three were open to grave suspicion, but the bargain held. Thus it happens that the city of Broken Hill, with a present population of 20,000 and a record silver production of $300,000,000, was hatched from a dozen eggs that were fit for nothing but the discouragement of incompetent barnstormers.

Of the world's bonanza mines few have given a better account of themselves than these of Broken Hill. Think of a mining region in which silver-lead ores are quarried in open cuts, like sandstone or granite or brick clay, and where one remarkable mine, the Consols, has a vein (albeit a narrow one) that yields ores that are 96 per cent. pure silver! The Broken Hill proprietary is the largest silver producer in the world to-day and in the 25 years that have passed since the barrier (as the argenteiferous lode is called) was found, its mines have paid more than $100,000,000 in dividends. They have yielded silver to the value of $300,000,000, to say nothing of ship loads of lead and zinc and no inconsiderable quantity of gold and copper and there is more high-grade ore "in sight" to-day than at any time in the past.

Like most of the world's great mines, the discovery of the Broken Hill barrier illustrates the proverbial "luck of fools and landlarks." In 1869 Charles Rasp left his old home in Germany to seek his fortune. Apparently he didn't find it in a hurry, for in 1884 he was only a "boundary rider"—and that is a bush country euphemism for sheep herder—killing time and ambition on one of the dreariest stretches of salt bush and mulga bush that ever New South Wales afforded. The country roundabout had been prospected before and was believed to be barren of valuable minerals. However, Rasp noticed that it was a peculiar country, that he traversed every day and he decided there must be something of value in the odd-looking outcrops of "ironstone" and the malformed hills.

He knew nothing of geology nor of mineralogy, but made a guess that the something "might be" tin. So he "pegged a block" (for so we "stake a claim" in Australia) and rustled for help to develop his problematical tin mine. He succeeded in getting together a syndicate composed of himself and six others (all employees of the sheep ranch), each one owning one share. The maximum assessment that could be levied was fixed at 10 shillings a share per week, or a total of about $36 a week

FRIEND OF THE SEPOYS.

Sir O'Moore Creagh Very Popular in India.

The Commander-in-Chief, Sir O'Moore Creagh, made an excellent impression during his first tour of inspection in India, says the London Daily Mail. Native officers and soldiers are delighted with their new Tangi Lat Sahib, or War Lord, and have named him Sipahi-ka-dosht, or the Sepoys' Friend.

Sir O'Moore Creagh's sympathetic Irish character and long experience in India make strong appeal to the native troops, who are astonished to hear him converse with one man in Baluchi, with another in Pushtu, and with a third in Urdu.

The increase of pay has given contentment to the native army and has confirmed its loyalty. The Commander-in-Chief in directing his efforts to improvement of the native lines or quarters, which have been sadly neglected during the last few years.

An improvement is also noticeable in the relations between British and Indians. People who have been absent from India for a few years recognize a disposition on the part of Europeans to cultivate a better understanding with educated Indians, and even to go out of their way to entertain and to help them.

NAVAL BASE ON NORTH SEA.

It Will Cost Germany $7,500,000 When Completed.

Plans for the new great naval base of the German Empire at the western end of the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal, at Bruensbuttel, have been finished and work will be begun immediately. The total cost will be in the neighborhood of $7,500,000.

When the work has been finally completed, which will require many years, it will be the greatest naval base on the North Sea. The new base will rank with Kiel, with its great natural harbor at the north-east end of the canal on the Baltic. As long ago as 1908 the improvement of the small harbor of Bruensbuttel was planned, but the matter was not made public. At the time an appropriation of only 250,000 marks ($62,500) was made for the preliminary work.

Full details of the plans of the great naval base were not then completed, for it had not then been determined to create either large dry or floating docks. The entire harbor will extend from Bruensbuttel north-eastward to a small lake which connects with the canal. It will be divided into harbors for the largest warships and for merchant vessels respectively, while the plans are for a general depth of eleven metres.

The construction of the new naval base carries immediately with it the deepening of the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal throughout the entire length, making it navigable by the largest German battleships now existing or to be built within the next decade.

SAVE THE PRECIOUS LEAF. Alas, they were overtaken and assailed to death in the dried-up bed of a river, where later a search party, headed by Captain Wilsome Black (now General Wilsome Black, C.B.) found them with the colors, torn, pierced and bloody, but safe, and brought them and the bodies of their heroic saviours back to a camp half mad with mingled joy and sorrow.

Every infantry battalion (except rifle regiments) has two colors—the King's color and the regimental color—but every rule has its exceptions, and one regiment at least boasts of a double set of colors, which are carried on great occasions. This corps is the 2nd Battalion Duke of Wellington's West Riding Regiment, formerly known as the 76th Foot, or Hindostan Regiment.

It was in commemoration of bygone services in India that the 76th were presented with a set of colors by the Honorable East India Company, and to this day the regiment has the privilege of carrying four colors on parade, in place of the customary two, the original Indian colors, which are about twice the size of ordinary ones, having been renewed from time to time by the India Office.

TELLS WHAT THEY HAVE DONE.

In the cavalry only one color, known as a guidon, is carried, and the Royal Engineers, Royal Artillery, and other corps do not carry colors.

The King's color is the same for all regiments, but the regimental color varies in hue, crests, adornments, and so on, with different regiments, according to their history and distinctions. The regimental color epitomises a regiment's war services, for on it are embroidered the names of campaigns and battles in which it has won special distinction, the right to add a fresh name to the color's roll of honor being one eagerly fought for and greatly prized when won.

Every officer joining a regiment carries the regimental color as soon as possible—an honor for which he pays by standing champagne to the mess, and also "tipping" the color party. In a high wind carrying a color is apt to be something of an ordeal.—Pearson's Weekly.

HORSE'S DINNER PARTY.

Eighty inmates of the home of rest for horses at Cricklewood, Eng., were given a special feast last week. At precisely 3 o'clock, Max, a veteran horse, 33 years old, thrust his head from his box, seized a bell rope and announced with a clang that dinner was ready. Immediately the grooms served up a dainty repast. Each horse was regaled with four pounds of carrots and apples, with brown and white bread, biscuits and sugar.

MISTRESS OF THE SITUATION.

Father (left in charge)—"No, you can not have any more cake." (Very seriously) "Do you know what I shall have to do if you go on making that dreadful noise?" Little Girl (sobbing)—"Yes." Father—"Well, what is it?" Little Girl—"Give me some more cake!" And she was quite right.

Among these may be mentioned the Portuguese man-of-war and the paper nautilus. Certain fishes, it appears, use the same method of progression, the dorsal fin acting as a sail. Broussonet called such fishes Poissons voliers. And the scientific name histiophorus (sail bearer), given to a genus of fish, implies a similar belief. In a contribution to the zoological Jahrbuch Louis Dollo claims that other genera are also sail bearers. He suggests also that among the cetaceans the grampus and bottle nosed whale may make a similar use of the dorsal fin.

Rossini's Memory.

The composer of "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" was blessed with a not very retentive memory, especially for names of persons introduced to him, a forgetfulness which was frequently the cause of much merriment whenever Rossini was among company. One day he met Bishop, the English composer. Rossini knew the face well enough and at once greeted him, "Ah, my dear Mr. ——" But he could progress no further. To convince him that he had not forgotten him Rossini commenced whistling Bishop's glee, "When the Wind Blows," a compliment which "the English Mozart" recognized and would as readily have heard as his less musical surname.

Effects of Ivy on Walls.

A writer in the Paris Revue Scientifique discusses the effects of ivy growing on walls of various kinds and arrives at the following conclusions: It is not advisable to allow the plant to grow on walls formed of newly-cut stone, since it soon destroys the smooth surface, although the damage does not extend to any noticeable depth; it is bad for ancient walls of cut stone, the joints of which have been opened by the various effects of time and the weather; it is not injurious on brick walls if the inhabitants are not subject to rheumatism, and it is useful on ancient walls of rubble since its interlaced branches tend to prevent the fall of loose stones.

Celebrating.

"What was that terrible noise going on in Popkin's apartment last night?" asked Wickley of the janitor. "They were celebrating their wedding," smiled the janitor. "Mrs. Popkin was hitting Popkin on the head with a rolling pin." "Knocking wood for luck, eh?" grinned Wickley as he passed on, while the janitor chuckled.

COLD OF EARLY CENTURIES.

In 1269 the entire width of the Baltic Sea was crossed by sledge. In 1339 a great many persons were frozen to death in England. In 1499 the Danube was frozen up from her source to her estuary in the Black Sea. In 1469 all vines in France were killed by frost. In 1609 and 1639 the port of Marseilles was frozen over, and there was great suffering and distress. In 1709 France was icebound from north to south, the ice extending for miles seaward. Birds and animals died of cold.

THE LATEST CENSUS.

"Now," said the teacher, "the population of our town is 12,000." "Twelve thousand and one!" interpolated a member of the class. "Bobby Giles has got a new baby brother!"

NO DEMAND FOR IT.

A rolling stone gathers no moss, but there's mighty little demand for moss now-a-days.

A woman is never so happy or unhappy as she thinks she is.

"states a claim" in Australia, and trusted for help to develop his problematical tin mine. He succeeded in getting together a syndicate composed of himself and six others (all employees of the sheep ranch), each one owning one share. The maximum assessment that could be levied was fixed at 10 shillings a share per week, or a total of about $35 a week available for development work. Seven claims, or blocks, were "pegged" and the legitimate parent of the great Broken Hill Proprietary Mining Co. embarked in mine development, with less working capital than would suffice to pay the office rent and postage bill of any really up-to-date American "mining syndicate" trying to float a Nevada prospect showing "free gold" or "virgin silver" "from the grass roots."

It wasn't long until some of the future silver kings began to feel the drain of 10 shillings every seven days upon their meagre salaries. So they were compelled to sell fourteenth, and even twenty-eighth, interest in the mine.

One day a boundary rider named Philip Charley, who had purchased a fourteenth interest, went to camp in great excitement. "Look at that, boys," said he, "we're in luck at last." The "boys" looked at the ore specimen he exhibited, but couldn't see anything to get excited about and one of them remarked disgustedly that it was "nothing" but "bloomin' carbonate of lead." "No," said Charley, "don't you see the specks of chloride?" That seemed to the rest of the crowd to be really funny. "Hold on to your share, Charley," said one, "you may make a thousand out of it." "I wouldn't sell out for that," the boundary rider replied. That was considered the wildest possible flight of the imagination. Yet within three years a fourteenth interest in that mine was worth on the market more than $250,000. In 10 years it was worth $2,500,000.

In 25 years the little $35-a-week syndicate has developed into the world's greatest silver-lead corporation, employing 6,000 men at its mines at Broken Hill and its reduction works at Port Pirie, and the municipality hatched from a dozen stale eggs has grown to be the wealthiest city of New South Wales, the creator of a hundred colossal fortunes.

A Sign.

"Blanchard must lately have made a lot of money somehow." "I haven't heard about it." "I haven't either, but he addressed our Sunday school recently and said it was a blessing to have a struggle."

JACK STRAW'S CASTLE.

House in London Which Recalls Dickens and Others.

According to the legend, the Spaniard's inn, still in existence, in London, was a rendezvous of Dick Turpin, and it is said that in the stable there he stalled his Black Bess. But the Spaniard's has other associations. Its tea gardens was certainly the spot that Dickens chose for Mrs. Bardell and her party to take tea in. Jack Straw's castle is quite as well known. Washington Irving mentions it in "The Sketch Book." In "The Tales of a Traveler" Irving makes Dribbit, the poor scribbler of Grub street, say that during his rambles he visited Hampstead and occasionally took dinner at the castle. It is with Dickens, John Forster, Mac-lise and their friends, however, that Jack Straw's castle is most intimately associated. In the bedroom which Dickens occupied may still be seen the chair in which the novelist used to sit.—Westminster Gazette.

"Perhaps, too, he does not believe you will carry out your threat."

"Yes; these French always imagine it is impossible to treat them like simple mortals, and that one would not dare to act here as one would in St. Petersburg. But I charge myself with undeceiving him. You will get ready the rolling prison that serves for these transports, and when he sees it all drawn up he will decide, perhaps, to speak."

"The question is whether he has really anything to confess," said Vacili, timidly.

"Do you doubt it?"

"Your excellency, I should not allow myself to entertain a different opinion from my master, but if you will deign to hear my reasons—"

"Speak, I consent."

"First, is it likely that any one in league with Nihilists would so easily have fallen into the trap I laid for him? The rascals of that sect do not dream of embarking for America."

"I have not said he was a regularly enrolled Nihilist. Firstly, he is not Russian; he is merely a simpleton whom one of their infernal women has seduced."

"Your excellency forgets that he loved the daughter of M. Dorgeres."

"Did he not rob me of my papers on the very day he was dismissed by the banker? On that day he listened to the voice of a woman who had been his mistress. She promised him her protection in foreign parts, and he was content with the fifty thousand francs taken from the safe."

"Unless it was sent to him as he asserts."

"Bah! This person who suddenly remembers an old debt is a very improbable character."

"However it may be, your excellency, this accomplice of M. de Carnoel it has been impossible to find."

"Because the search has not been well made. The information I have recently received from the chief of the third section is very incomplete. There are obscure women whom no one has thought of as managing and arranging these plots. They knew that my casket contained the whole plan of my mission, all my correspondence with the general and the minister."

"What is extraordinary is that they should have been aware of the depositing of the casket with your banker."

"Informed by the secretary, no doubt."

"Your excellency, I have made a minute inquest concerning the life led by the young man, and it is certain that he did not associate with a single Russian. I have gone so far as to obtain information concerning this Countess Yalta, who has funds deposited at M. Dorgeres and I am satisfied that he has never seen her."

"Oh, the Yalta has no connection with Nihilists. I have pointed her out to the department. She has been watched very closely, and it is certain that she is not engaged in politics. Her father was a kind of Circassian prince, who sold his principality to the emperor for several millions of rubles. The daughter married some other dispossessed lord, who soon left her a widow. She left Russia in her childhood, and has since only thought of her pleasures. Let us leave her and return to the Frenchman. I must decide what course to take. His month of probation will end tomorrow. I must, before giving it up, make one more attempt. I saw the banker yesterday, and he told me that the time of his daughter's marriage was fixed. We shall see what the prisoner will say to this disastrous intelligence. It is the ruin of his last hopes. What do you say to my idea, Vacili?"

"Your excellency, I confess, another has occurred to me."

"Let us have it."

"I start from a principle you have just laid down, that the young man will keep silence to the end for fear of the vengeance of the Nihilists. I have more than once been disposed to regret his capture. Do you not think that had he remained free he would have compromised himself by some imprudent act?"

"Yes," murmured the colonel, "we were perhaps too hasty. Unfortunately it is too late to retrace our steps. This Carnoel is forewarned. He would not be so foolhardy as to visit his accomplices, or rather his accomplice, for I am convinced it is only a woman."

"Your excellency," said Vacili, with embarrassment, "there is still time to have recourse to a means you have overlooked. I believe it would be better to restore M. de Carnoel to liberty."

"To release the Frenchman? You are mad, Vacili."

"Pardon me, your excellency. I have reflected much on the situation and I see no other means of discovering M. de Carnoel's accomplices."

"You forget that his first care would be to avenge himself on me. He would enter a complaint for arbitrary sequestration."

"Your excellency, I do not believe it. It would compel him to enter into explanations which he would rather avoid. Besides, you could exact a promise of silence. If he gave you his word of honor he would keep it."

"I admit that he will not complain to the authorities, but if he sees Mlle. Dorgeres or writes to her, which is infinitely probable, he will naturally be led to explain why he did not appear for a month."

"Your excellency, I know him. I have studied him. If he promises quantly spoken of you, and have regretted that I had not the pleasure of your acquaintance."

"I am obliged to you, sir," replied Maxime, coldly; "but when you learn why I have come—"

"Tell me something of M. Dorgeres, I have not seen him for some days."

"I do not come on his behalf."

"How is his lovely daughter? Is it true that her marriage-day is fixed?"

"I do not know, sir, and I have something else to talk about."

This was said in so dry a tone and so serious an air that the colonel immediately changed his attitude and language.

"Then, sir, be kind enough to explain yourself," he said, haughtily. "I thought you wished to pay me a friendly visit. It seems I was mistaken; but I cannot guess what you have to say to me."

"I have to ask what has become of M. de Carnoel," replied Maxime, looking fixedly at M. Borisoff.

It must have been that the colonel was gifted with a sang froid that was invincible, for he replied without betraying himself:

"You wish to know what has become to M. de Carnoel, who was employed, I believe, with M. Dorgeres, my banker?"

"Yes," replied Maxime.

"Well, I wish to know why you address yourself to me, who had no relations with this gentleman. I saw him, I believe, once in M. Dorgeres' office, and did not speak to him."

"It is possible, but subsequently you were much occupied with him."

"Be good enough to explain yourself more clearly."

"Willingly. I need not say that M. de Carnoel left my uncle's house the evening the safe was robbed. A casket was taken belonging to you, and M. de Carnoel was accused of the theft."

"It is true. But it was agreed that this should be kept secret, and I am astonished that M. Dorgeres has related it to you."

"No matter, I know it; and I know also that you charged yourself with discovering M. de Carnoel."

"I engaged your uncle not to lodge a complaint. It would be offensive to me to have my name mixed up with judicial inquests. M. Dorgeres yielded to my view, and begged me to make use of my diplomatic relations for the discovery of the wretch who had robbed him. Unfortunately the researches ended in nothing. M. de Carnoel went into Brittany, and after his return to Paris could not be traced."

that no one hears you, and then if you get the worst of it or want to back out you can. Now hand me the five dollars."

Hughes thought a second, and then said:—

"Did anyone hear us make this bargain?"

"Not a soul," replied Jackson.

"Well, then," was the prompt answer, "I think I'll begin on you."

WHAT RUFUS HARRIS SAYS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

After Trying Five Doctors for His Kidney Disease He Found Relief in the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Hurdville, Ont., Feb. 14. (Special)—"After trying five doctors for Kidney Trouble, from which I had suffered for three years, I find that Dodd's Kidney Pills relieve me best of all. If I keep on feeling as I have since I began taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I shall be well pleased and I am hoping they will cure me."

So says Rufus Harris, well known in this village. "I had stiffness in the joints," he continues, "cramps in the muscles, backache and was heavy and sleepy after meals. I was depressed (and low spirited, perspired freely, was often dizzy and always thirsty, but since taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I am feeling very good."

If you have any of the symptoms, Mr. Harris tells of, it is time for you to beware. They are the symptoms of Kidney Disease and may be the fore-runners of Rheumatism, Dropsy, Lumbago, Heart Disease, or even the dread Bright's Disease itself. Take warning and guard against suffering or even death itself by putting the Kidneys in good working order with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

NOE EVEN ONE TOOT.

A deaf but pious English lady, visiting a small country town in Scotland, went to church armed with an ear-trumpet. The elders had never seen one, and viewed it with suspicion and uneasiness. After a short consultation, one of them went to the lady, just before the opening of the service, and, wagging his finger at her warningly, whispered, "One toot and ye're out!"

POISONED BY STOCKING DYE

A case at Kingston shows vividly the danger of neglecting to apply Zam-Buk to a cut or a sore. Mrs. A. Harrison, living in Place d'Armes, while attending to her household duties, struck her ankle against a sharp projection on the furniture. She took no notice of the injury, deeming it trivial. In a day or two the ankle began to swell and cause excessive pain. A doctor, called in, found that dye from her stocking had entered the wound and set up blood poison. Treatment with Zam-Buk followed, but it was several days before the limb was out of danger. "Had it not been for the powerful antiseptic properties of Zam-Buk and its exceptional healing virtues, the wound might have had a very serious result," says Mrs. Harrison.

PROFESSOR'S ENGLISH.

How often we misuse words to the extent of saying the contrary to what we mean is pointed out in the following anecdote.

A college professor who prided himself on his correct English heard his wife remark:—

"I intend to call Jane to bring a fresh bucket of water."

"You doubtless mean a bucket of fresh water," corrected the Professor. "I wish you would pay some attention to your rhetoric; your mistakes are curious."

A few moments later the Professor said:—

"My dear, that picture would show to better advantage if you were to hang it over the clock."

"Ah!" she replied, quietly, "you doubtless mean if I were to hang it above the clock. If I were to hang it over the clock we could not tell the time. I wish you would be more careful with your rhetoric, my dear; your mistakes are curious."

And the Professor all at once became very much interested in the book he was reading.

A sentry while on duty was bitten by a valuable retriever, and drove his bayonet into the dog. Its owner sued him in the county court for its value, and the evidence given showed that the soldier had not been badly bitten after all. "Why did you not knock the dog with the butt end of your rifle?" asked the judge. The Court rocked with laughter when the sentry replied: "Why didn't he bite me with his tail?"

WORTH KNOWING.

Simple Remedy That Any One Can Prepare at Home.

Most people are more or less subject to coughs and colds. A simple remedy that will break up a cold quickly and cure any cough that is curable is made by mixing two ounces of Glycerine, a half ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whisky. You can get these in any good drug store and easily mix them in a large bottle. The mixture is highly recommended by the Leach Chemical Co., of Cincinnati, who prepare the genuine Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure for dispensing.

Don't boast of your lineage. It's a dozen to a quart that if your trace it back a few generations you will find some one who borrowed a horse without the owner's consent.

To Men Who Live Inactive Lives.—Exercise in the open air is the best tonic for the stomach and system generally; but there are those who are compelled to follow sedentary occupations and the inactivity tends to restrict the healthy action of the digestive organs and sickness follows. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills regulate the stomach and liver and restore healthy action. It is wise to have a packet of the pills always on hand.

The optimist cheers, but the pessimist saves his breath for the purpose of letting out a calamity howl later on.

land $25,000,000 of cash, giving to the admiralty full discretion to expend the said sum at such time and for such purposes of naval defence as in their judgment may best serve to increase the united strength of the Empire."

Views on the Vessels.

Mr. Borden expressed an opinion upon the character of the vessels he would like to see in Canada. This was last March. He said then—see Hansard, p. 3614:

I venture to think that a system of torpedo boats and submarines, such as has been adopted by the Commonwealth of Australia, would be perhaps the most effective way in which we could assist Great Britain in a stated policy of naval defence."

Opposed to Admiralty.

This view is in direct opposition to the suggestions of the Admiralty, for on page 24 of the report of the Defence Conference it is clearly set forth. "That local defence flotillas, consisting of torpedo craft and submarines, might be of assistance in time of war to the operations of the fleet, but such flotillas cannot co-operate on the high seas in the wider duties of protection of trade and preventing attacks from hostile cruisers and squadrons."

This expressed opinion of Mr. Borden is strangely at variance with his views to day, because one of the objections urged against the scheme submitted by the Government is that the navy is of the "tin-pot" variety and could not meet the attack of a second class cruiser.

To Defend Coast.

The proposed Canadian navy is designed particularly to defend the coast and trade routes, and could engage any hostile cruiser which might appear on our shores, while the little boats suggested by Mr. Borden might with some propriety be designated as forming a "tin-pot" navy, in addition to which their use has been discouraged by the British Admiralty.

Foster Swallowed Himself.

While Mr. Borden has changed his attitude completely, in an attempt to reconcile the discordant elements in his party, Mr. Foster has swallowed himself holus bolus. This gentleman has not a loophole through which he can

He Launched Boomerang.

Mr. Foster commenced his speech by alluding to members on the Liberal side as voting for anything that they were required to do, because they had passed through what he called the composing room, the thumb screw and the rack. In a manner particularly offensive and unparliamentary he illustrated his point by saying that not one man had registered as an independent; not one had registered a single protest. He then employed these words.

The Boomerang.

"I was wrong: there was one, Frank Oliver, a sturdy independent from the wild and woolly west. Oliver was quickly placed in office, and ever since has been gagged and uttered no protest."

Supposing one were to contrast this statement of Foster's with the facts, it would appear that Mr. Oliver was elected as an Independent Liberal in 1899, that he was re-elected in 1900-1904-1905 and 1908 as a straight Liberal; that while he entered the House in 1896 he was not appointed to office until 1905. So that the "quickly placed in office," as stated by Mr. Foster, meant nine years.

How It Hits Foster.

Compare this with Mr. Foster's own record upon the same line. He was elected in 1882 as an Independent Conservative. In 1885 he was placed in office as a straight Conservative.

While it took Mr. Oliver nine years to secure office it took Mr. Foster three, and in the meantime the latter gentleman had not been elected as a straight Conservative.

He Surrendered to Thumb Screw.

One is forced to the conclusion that Foster passed through the composing room and yielded to the thumb-screw and rack in the short space of three years, in exchange for his independence, and the joys of office. Mr. Foster should take the beam out of his own eye.

The greater part of Mr. Foster's speech was directed at Sir Wilfrid Laurier. These attacks are not welcome in the House, and most unpopular in the country. They provoke comparison between the public record of the two gentlemen, and Mr. Foster does not shine in comparison. As one speaker aptly said, the name of Sir Wilfrid Laurier will live in history, when that of Foster is forgotten.

Macdonald's Hot Shot.

Mr. E. M. Macdonald, of Pictou, N. S., delivered a brilliant speech on the navy on Tuesday last. He analyzed the speeches of Mr. Borden and Mr. Foster, and quoting their words, showed what a complete change of front had occurred. He attributed this to the thumb-screw and rack of party expediency.

Borden's First Attitude.

Referring to the change of front of Mr. Borden, Mr. Macdonald quoted him as being opposed to a money contribution. These were Mr. Borden's words:

"From a constitutional and political standpoint. I am opposed to it, for many reasons. In the first place, I do not believe that it would endure. In the second place, it would be a source of friction. It would become a bone of partisan contention. It would be subject to criticism."

Taking up the speech of Mr. Foster, Mr. Macdonald showed wherein Mr. Foster had placed himself on record as against the very resolution of Mr. Borden which he was now supporting. He quoted extracts and placed them on parallel lines, showing the one to be a direct contradiction of the other.

MINISTER AND ZAM-BUK

Cured Him of a Bad Sore Which Defied All Other Remedies For Two Years.

Rev. Charles E. Stafford, of Bridgeburg, Ont., says: "I had been much troubled for over two years with a sore on my left cheek. I tried all kinds of salves and lotions, but nothing I procured seemed to have the least bit of effect towards healing the sore. Hearing of Zam-Buk, I decided to give it a trial, and see if it would bring about a cure, as so many other things had failed. I purchased a supply, and commenced with the treatment. After several applications, to my great joy, Zam-Buk has effected what for two years I tried in vain to bring about—a complete cure."

Case after case could be quoted, in which, as in the above instance, Zam-Buk has worked cures when everything else tried had failed. There is a reason for this. Away back in the days of Roman gladiators, secret balms were used for the healing of cuts and injuries sustained in the arena and in battle. Then came a period during which external balms were neglected, followed by a period in which all the salves and embrocations had as their base animal fats and oils. Zam-Buk marks a new epoch. It is absolutely devoid of all animal fats, all mineral coloring matters, and is composed entirely of rich medicinal herbal extracts.

Skin diseases, such as eczema, ringworm, salt sores, and various itchy eruptions, are cured by Zam-Buk.

OTTAWA NEWS.

As the debate on the naval bill proceeds and the speeches of Mr. Borden, Mr. Foster and other lesser lights, delivered on March 29, 1909, are analyzed and compared with their utterances to-day, it becomes more and more evident that as public men and leaders of a political party, they are unreliable, inconsistent and vacillating.

What Borden First Said.

Mr. Borden in March last was in favor of a Canadian navy. He said—Hansard, p. 3613:—

"I am entirely of the opinion, in the first place, that the proper line upon which we should proceed in that regard is the line of having a Canadian naval force of our own. I entirely believe in that."

In this respect, Mr. Borden has changed his opinion, he now opposes the formation of a Canadian navy, and is in favor of contributing $25,000,000 in cash to the Imperial authorities, thus placing it beyond Canadian control, and thereby admitting the principle of taxation without representation.

Upon Parliamentary Control.

In March, 1909, Mr. Borden expressed himself as favoring Parliamentary control of any money designed for protective purposes—Hansard p. 3613—he said:—

"I am at one with the Prime Minister in this respect also, that I think that any expenditure of money designed for that purpose, as far as possible, ought, in the main at least, to be under the control of our own Parliament."

What He Says Now.

Mr. Borden has since introduced a resolution favoring sending to Engaged by the British Admiralty.

Foster Swallowed Himself.

While Mr. Borden has changed his attitude completely, in an attempt to reconcile the dissonant elements in his party, Mr. Foster has swallowed himself whole. This gentleman has not a loophole through which he can escape.

On March 29, '09, Mr. Foster expressed himself as opposed to a money contribution.

He opposed a contribution of Dreadnoughts which he said amounted to the same thing as a money contribution.

He was in favor of a Canadian navy something that would take root in the country and grow.

He said he took no interest in a contribution spent by another. He wanted something grafted on the soil of Canada which develops until it incites the spirit of defence.

He did not believe in hiring someone else to do what Canada ought to do for herself.

He could not see how the contribution could be fixed, or how long that sum, when fixed, would remain the proper sum, the result would be constant negotiation, disagreement and trouble.

A reference to Mr. Foster's speech of March 29, '09, Hansard, pages 3589 to 3591, will disclose his words as given above, only in greater detail.

What Foster Thinks Now.

What is his position to-day? He supported Mr. Borden's resolution to send $25,000,000 of cash out of the country, Canada having no control whatever over the expenditure.

He opposed the creation of a Canadian navy. He had no interest in the prosperity of the Canadian workingman.

He changed his views altogether about establishing something in Canada that would take root and grow.

He recanted with regard to sending money out of the country, and as to the loss of interest displayed in the expenditure of money we did not control.

He changed his mind about hiring someone to do what Canada ought to do for herself.

In other words, he swallowed himself to meet the expediency of party.

...had passed himself on record as against the very resolution of Mr. Borden which he was now supporting. He quoted extracts and placed them on parallel lines, showing the one to be a direct contradiction of the other.

Opposes Naval College at Halifax.

Mr. MacDonald caused Mr. Borden some uneasy moments when he asked him if he was opposed to the establishment of dockyards and naval college in the city of Halifax, which Mr. Borden represents. To this he received no answer.

Sealey Wants Canadian Navy.

Mr. W. O. Sealey thought that in view of the resolution of March last the House should not hesitate to pass the naval bill, which was a practical expression of the decision of the House on that occasion. Mr. Sealey favored a Canadian navy, built in Canada by Canadian workmen with Canadian material and Canadian money. He favored also the construction of dry docks and shipyards in Canada. He gave as an example of the necessity for these large dry docks, that when the great ocean liner Empress of Ireland was disabled she had to go to New York for repairs, Canada having no facilities equal to the task. He expressed the opinion that Canada's trade and commerce and merchant marine were too important to remain longer under present conditions.

Build Up Steel Industries.

Mr. Sealey from the standpoint of a practical man demonstrated the importance of building up our steel industries so that steel plates for use in ships of the navy could be manufactured in Canada. Mr. Sealey referred to the Canadian navy as being "tin pot," and showed that if that were so, the British Government had 60 or 70 tinpots of the Bristol variety, 71 Boadiceas, and 157 Destroyers, just the same as it was proposed to build for Canada. Mr. Sealey was strong for a Canadian navy, and he supported his opinion by practical, patriotic reasons.

It is a strange thing that no Conservative who has yet spoken has advanced one idea why there should not be established a Canadian navy, neither has any argument been presented in favor of sending out of the country $25,000,000 of the taxes of Canadians.

Don't Agree With Borden.

Dr. Chisholm, Conservative of Huron is one of the most respected men in the House, and a man of scholarly attainment. Speaking on the navy bill, he said he was not in accord with either the leader of the Opposition or the Government. He said he expressed the views of his constituents, and before he changed them, he wanted more than mere bald assertions. That he said, had been tried on him already and it had failed. This suggests that his party tried the Foster plan of the composing room, the thumb screw and the rack, but that in Dr. Chisholm's case they failed. Dr. Chisholm is known as a man of great independence of thought and with well grounded opinions of his own on political questions, and as he neither seeks nor receives any help from his party in campaign times he feels at liberty to express his opinions, whether they agree with those of his party managers or not.

Georgian Bay Canal.

The annual discussion on the Georgian Bay Canal occurred on Monday last. Hon. Mr. Fielding stated frankly to the House that the Government was in favor of building the canal, but the obligations at present were so onerous that it could not be commenced at once. He thought the whole project a fascinating one and wanted to be counted among its warmest supporters.

Mr. Hodgins, of Pontiac, gave a very practical address on the subject. He thought that by 1912 the Western provinces would produce 500,000,000 bushels of grain half of which would be for export and naturally pass down this proposed canal. He was of opinion that the Georgian Bay Canal should be constructed before anything was done with the Welland Canal although he thought that the traffic from

HARD TO PLEASE.

No Use Trying to Be Neighborly With Some People.

When Mrs. Calloway met Mrs. Deeson in the market one morning and inquired for the news of the people in her block it came to light that the Carolsons, who used to be neighbors of the Calloways, now held that relationship to the Deesons. Naturally the character of the Carolsons as a family and as individuals was shortly under discussion. Mrs. Deeson, who admitted somewhat grudgingly that she supposed that the Carolsons were "pleasant enough," then turned confidential and recited a story, which The Chicago News prints:

"Mrs. Carolson is at Shallow Lake now, isn't she?" Mrs. Calloway had asked.
"Yes," said the other woman. "and she never said a word to me about it before she went. I saw Mr. Carolson weeding the pansies the other morning, and I called out just to be neighborly. 'Your wife gone away?'"

"He grunted something that might have meant either 'yes' or 'no,' I went on:

"'You'd better go away, too, and stay over Sunday with her. I'll look after your house.' He gave another grunt."

"Why not stay until the following Monday?" I asked.

"Thank you," he growled. "I wish my firm was as generous as you are. Then he went into the house."

"A little while after that my daughter met him on the street carrying a suit case, so I knew he had taken my advice."

"I suppose he won't be home for ten days. He must have gone in a hurry, for he didn't tell me a thing about his going," I said to my daughter.

"I had so much work to do that I could give little time to that place. Still, I like to be neighborly, so early the next morning I went over and picked all their pansies. Then seeing that Mr. Carolson hadn't stepped the milk or his paper, I helped myself to both. Afterward I telephoned to the milkman not to leave any more milk."

"I ran to the door every time I heard their bell ring and explained to the caller that the family had gone away for ten days. It was a lot of trouble, for I had to keep watching all the time."

"You always have such a sense of responsibility when your neighbors are away," Mrs. Deeson said Mrs. Calloway.

"Well, I try to do my duty by everybody. Late in the afternoon a boy came with a suit case. I called to him that there was no use ringing the Carolsons' bell, as they wouldn't be at home for ten days."

"I had special orders to bring these clothes to-day," said the boy. "Won't you take them in—dollar to collect?"

"I don't meddle with Mr. Carolson's clothes," I said. "Bring 'em back in ten days." Then I shut the door. You have to be firm with boys like that. They'd argue all day if you'd let 'em, and I had my dinner to get."

"We had just sat down to the table when my daughter said, 'Who's that picking the Carolsons' pansies?'"

"Here, you!" I called. And if it wasn't Mr. Carolson himself, looking madder than a hatter."

"Some one has picked them all!" he snorted.

"I thought you were away," I said.

"That accounts for the milk and the papers," I supposed. "Perhaps you've the clothes that I am waiting for?"

"I sent them back," I began, but didn't get a chance to finish the sentence. If I told you what he said—I could hardly believe my ears! Some people are hard to please, aren't they, Mrs. Calloway?"

How often do you eat this food?

A short time ago there appeared in the columns of one of the prominent magazines an article on building brain and muscle by the proper selection of the foods you eat.

A good many people were surprised to find oatmeal placed at the top of the list of foods recommended; but if the article had appeared in an English or Scotch paper every reader would have expected to see first place given to good oatmeal.

As a matter of fact Great Britain and Europe come to us for tremendous quantities of Quaker Oats because it represents to them perfect food, being the richest in flavor and best in cleanliness and purity, of all oatmeals.

Americans should eat more Quaker Oats; the results would soon show themselves in improved conditions of health and strength.

THE CABINET LEAK.

Daniel Webster Was Not Long In Discovering Its Source.

Once years ago, when Daniel Webster was secretary of state, there was an important foreign matter up for discussion before the cabinet, and the utmost secrecy was of course maintained, but the whole thing was blazoned about in a few hours after the cabinet meeting. So the president hastily sent for his cabinet to talk over this leak. Each man had a different idea of it.

Finally Mr. Webster arose, saying, "You, gentlemen, go on with your discussion, and I'll be back in a minute." In a few minutes he returned and repeated every word that had been spoken in the room in his absence. He explained that if by standing close to the door outside the cabinet room you held your ear to it you could not distinguish one intelligible word, but if moving back from the door and a little to one side upon a certain spot in the carpet you kept an attentive ear every word could be plainly heard as though whispered. Some enterprising eavesdropper had been experimenting with the door and had found that upon that exact spot there was some acoustic property of the door or room that conveyed the sound in perfect entirety.

German Surtax Removed.

Mr. Fielding, Minister of Finance, has been quietly conducted commercial relations with Germany, and was able to announce in the House that the surtax upon Canadian goods would be removed by Germany, and that in return for this Canada would remove the surtax from German goods. It will be remembered that when Canada gave a preference to Great Britain Germany claimed the same advantage, and failing to get it, imposed a surtax, or extra tax upon goods coming from Canada. In response to this Canada promptly imposed a surtax upon German goods entering Canada. Germany having removed the surtax Canada has done the same, and trade relations between the two countries will doubtless, from this time, receive a great stimulus.

All-Canadian Navy Wanted.

The navy bill will occupy the boards for some time yet. Many members have expressed their intention of speaking upon the subject. The Opposition have decidedly the worst of the argument to date. The policy of sending $25,000,000 of good Canadian money out of the country is not a popular one, whereas the Laurier policy of a Canadian navy, built in Canada, by Canadian working men with Canadian money grows in public favor.

The Deadly Nightshade.

The reason why nightshade appears to be deadly in some cases and merely injurious in others may be traced to the difference existing between woody and deadly nightshade. The commoner species, the flowers of which are to be found in nearly every hedge, suggestive of its cousins the potato and tomato, has berries that would probably cause discomfort if eaten, but would not kill anybody. But the real deadly nightshade, which is very rare, is the plant from which we get belladonna. Shakespeare's "insane root that takes the reason prisoner," and its berries are so poisonous as to have given the plant its old English name of dwale, taken from the French dwale, mourning.—London Globe.

Chinese Opium Smugglers.

Of opium smuggling in China a Yunnan correspondent writes: "The other day some men passed through several towns on the way to the capital with three coffins. In the first was a corpse. The other two were packed with opium. Being suspected at Yunnanfu, the first coffin was opened, but the carriers made as much noise as they could for having their coffin burst, and the second and third coffins were not examined. Quite common is it for men to travel in small crowds, smuggling opium from the province of Kweichow. They travel by night only, by lantern light over the mountains, and in the day hide from any possible official searches."

Make Each Animal Worth 25% Over Its Cost On 3/4 of a Cent a Day

Nobody ever heard of "stock food" curing the bots or colic, making hens lay in winter, increasing the yield of milk five pounds per cow a day, or restoring run-down animals to plumpness and vigor.

When you feed "Stock Food" to your cow, horse, swine or poultry, you are merely feeding them what you are growing on your own farm.

Your animals do need more feed, but something to help their bodies get all the good out of the feed you give them so they can get fat and stay fat all year round; also to prevent disease, cure disease and keep them up to the best possible condition. No "stock food" can do all these things. ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC can and does. It is.

Not a "Stock Food" But a "Conditioner"

ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC contains no grain, nor farm products. It increases yield of milk from three to five pounds per cow per day before the Specifc has been used two weeks. It makes the milk richer and adds flesh faster than any other preparation known, fed with ordinary materials. ROYAL PURPLE is as large at six weeks old as they would be when plumpness almost magically. Cures bots, colic, worms, skin diseases and debility permanently.

Don McIlwain, the horseman, says: "I have used ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC persistently in the feeding of 'The Eel,' 2024, largest winner of any pacer on Grand Circuit in 1908. These horses have never been off their feed since I commenced using Royal Purple Specifc almost a year ago, and I will always have it in my stables."

Royal Purple STOCK AND POULTRY SPECIFICS

50c. package of ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC will last one animal seventy days, which is a little over two-thirds of a cent a day. ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC is given but once a day, and lasts half again as long. A $1.50 package containing four times the amount of the fifty-cent package will last 280 days. ROYAL PURPLE will increase the value of your stock 25%.

It is an astonishingly quick fattener, stimulating the appetite and the relish for food, assisting nature to digest and turn feed into flesh. As a hog fattener it is a leader. It will save many times its cost in veterinary bills. ROYAL PURPLE POULTRY SPECIFIC is our other specific for poultry, not for stock. A 50-cent package will last twenty-five hens 70 days, or a pair costing $1.50 will last twenty-five hens 280 days, which is four times more material for only three times the cost. It makes a "laying machine" out of your hens. Every package of ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC or POULTRY SPECIFIC is guaranteed.

Just use ROYAL PURPLE on one of your animals and any other preparation on another animal in the same condition; after comparing results you will say ROYAL PURPLE has them all beat to death, or else back comes your money. FREE—Ask your merchant or write us for our valuable 32-page booklet on cattle and poultry diseases, containing also cooking recipes and full particulars about ROYAL PURPLE STOCK and POULTRY SPECIFICS.

Recommended As An Ideal Remedy

W. S. BOND, Esq.

Lloydton, Ont., March 19th, 1909.
"For some years I have been greatly troubled with headaches and indigestion, brought on by stomach disorders, constipation and biliousness. I had tried many remedies with only indifferent success, until 'Fruit-a-tives' came to my notice. Being a general storekeeper, I was selling a good many 'Fruit-a-tives' to my customers and, remarking how pleased they were with the results obtained from using 'Fruit-a-tives,' I decided to try them and, I might say, the effects were almost magical. Headaches and biliousness disappeared and to-day I recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to my customers as 'An ideal remedy.'

"I might also add that about three years ago I was laid up with LUMBAGO AND SCIATICA—couldn't get out of bed or lift one foot over the other. A good treatment of 'Fruit-a-tives' cured me of these pains and banished the Sciatica and Lumbago so that to-day I am as well as ever and can lift anything necessary."

Effects of Ivy on Walls.

A writer in the Paris Revue Scientifique discusses the effects of ivy growing on walls of various kinds and arrives at the following conclusions: It is not advisable to allow the plant to grow on walls formed of newly-cut stone, since it soon destroys the smooth surface, although the damage does not extend to any noticeable depth; it is bad for ancient walls of cut stone, the joints of which have been opened by the various effects of time and the weather; it is not injurious on brick walls if the inhabitants are not subject to rheumatism, and it is useful on ancient walls of rubble since it will decay the mortar and prevent the fall of the stones.

A Primitive Clock.

A naturalist while visiting Great Sanger, one of those islands of the Indian ocean known as the Celebes or Spice Islands, found a curious time recorder lodged at the house of a rajah. Two bottles were firmly lashed together and fixed in a wooden frame. A quantity of black sand ran from one bottle into the other in just half an hour, and when the upper bottle was empty the frame was reversed. Twelve short sticks marked with notches from one to twelve were hung upon a string. A hook was placed between the stick bearing the number of notches corresponding to the hour last struck and the one to be struck next. The sentry announced the time by striking the hours on a large gong.

AN OBSTINATE QUEEN.

Her Encounter With the Mentone Road Mender.

Xavier Paoli, whose duty for a quarter of a century was the safeguarding of royal visitors to France, found the late Queen Elizabeth of Austria a recalcitrant charge. He said:

"I was never easy so long as she obstinately refused to permit one of my men to follow her, even at a distance. Once, however, having learned that the Italian laborers who were mending the road to Mentone had spoken in a threatening way of the sovereigns who were always coming to the country, I begged the empress to be kind enough not to walk in their direction. She was much displeased.

"'Always afraid!' she exclaimed. 'I say again that I have no fear of them—and I will promise nothing.' I was as determined as she. I doubled my watchfulness and took it upon myself to send over the Mentone road one of my Corsican agents, dressed like a road mender, but thoroughly armed beneath his clothes, with directions to mingle with the Italian laborers. Wearing a pair of velvet trousers and a cotton-jumper, and made up to look old and wrinkled, he was quite unrecognizable. As he spoke Italian fluently, he disarmed all suspicion, his companions taking him for a newly-hired comrade.

"He was breaking stones as well as he could when suddenly a well-known figure appeared at the turn of the road. Darkness had begun to fall, and the empress, with her reader, was returning to Cape Martin. The false road mender waited anxiously. When she came opposite his group she stopped, hesitated a moment, then signing him out, no doubt because he seemed to be the oldest, she approached him, saying gently: 'That is a hard trade of yours, my good fellow.'

"Not daring to raise his head, he stammered a few words in Italian.

"'You do not speak French?'

"'No, signora.'

"'You have children?'

"'Yes, signora.'

"'Then here is something for them,' and she slipped a gold piece into his hand. 'Tell them it is from a lady who loves children very much.'

"And the empress walked on.

"That evening at the hotel she came to me with laughing eyes.

"'Well, M. Paoli, could me! I have disobeyed you. I have been on the Mentone road. I have talked with a road mender, and I am still alive, you see!'

"I never dared to confess to her that the worthy road mender was my faithful Corsican."

His Portrait.

One of the members of a certain suburban photographic society recently delivered a lecture, illustrated by lantern views. Another member, thinking to have a joke at the expense of the lecturer, slipped in among the slides a lantern portrait of himself. The joke would come in, of course, by the portrait appearing on the screen immediately after the lecturer had announced the appearance of something quite different. Fate and chance were unkindly against the humorist, for when his portrait was presented the lecturer, without knowing what was on the screen, gravely read from his list:

"The next slide, ladies and gentlemen, is the picture of a refractory donkey."

A Sign.

When "Work" Becomes "Labor"

There's Something Wrong.
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Will Right It.

Thousands of Women feel just like this.

When it seems as if you simply could not bear up any longer it is high time to look for the cause of the trouble—and the remedy. In an astonishingly large number of cases the real cause of woman's misery is found to be constipation, and the remedy that always cures is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Neglect of the daily movement of the bowels, so necessary to health, soon poisons the whole system from the impurities retained in the body. Headaches, indigestion, biliousness and lassitude follow, and often more serious female disorders are brought on or aggravated.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills not only regulate the bowels, but they stimulate kidneys and skin as well to throw off waste matter and purify the blood. The result is quickly apparent in the disappearance of the headaches, biliousness, and the return of health and vigor. Thousands of women all over the world owe their present good health to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

TWO SILENETS.

Eben Hid His Face From His Wife, and She Cherished Her Own.

"How's business, Eben?"

The old man was washing at the sink after his day's work.

"Fine, Marthy, fine!"

"Does the stuff look just the same, with the red geranium in the window? Land, how I'd like to see it with the sun shining in! How does it look, Eben?"

Eben did not answer for a moment. When he did his voice shook a bit.

"The stuff's never been the same since you left, Marthy."

A faint little flush came into Martha's withered cheek. Is a wife ever so old to be moved by her husband's flattery?

For years Eben and Martha had kept a tiny nation store. Then Martha had sick and was taken to the hospital. That was much ago. She was out now, but she would never be strong again, never be partner in their happy little trade again.

"I can't get over a hankering for a sign of the store," thought Martha one forenoon. "If I take it real careful I can get it done. I isn't so far. Eben I could, but he'd be tickled most to death."

It took a long time for her to draw her old downtown, but at last she stood at the head of the little street where the store was. And of a sudden she stopped. A crowd of young men, with their arms around each other, were gathered in front of the store. They were all looking at the old man, and as he too looked at his wives.

Martha clutched at the wall of the building. She looked over the wall at the little store. It was now, as it had been, filled with fruit, and an Italian man, dressed in a white shirt and a red vest, was standing in the doorway. She turned and looked at the old man. He was looking at her with a smile.

TO THE INTEREST OF EVERY FACTORY.

The question of supply of raw material to the cheese factory and creamery is a first consideration; the finished product in paying quantity and of good quality is mainly dependent on a large supply of good milk and cream.

As the supply is also of importance to every director of any dairy company, every factory owner and every maker, such men should see to it that each patron is interested in cow testing. Once a patron begins testing each cow individually he commences to take far more interest in the herd generally and is likely to supply not only more milk and cream but far better quality, and cared for better. In many herds the milk yield has been increased by twenty and even thirty per cent in three years through a knowledge of each animal's capacity, which led to weeding out the poor cows and feeding the good ones a little better. Is it not to the advantage of every factory to see its patrons prosperous? If farmers supply more milk or cream from a given number of cows, or from a certain number of acres, it means that the factory receives more raw material from the same territory, thereby lessening the cost of hauling, and lowering in proportion the expense of making, while a longer factory season is possible as the milking period is extended.

Factory officials are invited to recommend cow testing to all their patrons. If a list of names and addresses be sent to the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, literature on the subject will be mailed direct to each.

SAVED BY THE KING.

An Incident in the Career of Holbein, the Painter.

There happened an affair in England which might have been fatal to Holbein if the king had not protected him. On the report of his character a nobleman of the first quality wanted one day to see him when he was drawing a figure after the life. Holbein in answer begged his lordship to defer the honor of his visit to another day, which the nobleman took for an affront. He broke open the door and very rudely went upstairs. Holbein, hearing the noise, left his chamber and, meeting the lord at his door, fell into a violent passion and pushed him backward from the top of the stairs to the bottom.

Considering, however, immediately what he had done, he escaped from the tumult he had raised and made the best of his way to the king. The nobleman, much hurt, though not so much as he pretended, was there soon after him, and upon opening his grievance the king ordered Holbein to ask pardon for his offense. But this only irritated the nobleman the more, who would not be satisfied with less than his life, upon which the king sternly replied:

"My lord, you have not now to do with Holbein, but with me. Whatever punishment you may contrive by way of revenge against him shall assuredly be inflicted upon yourself. Remember, pray, my lord, that I can whenever I please make seven lords of seven plowmen, but I cannot make one Holbein even of seven lords."

How the Frost Fence "Gives" and "Takes" Like a Spring

ANY "coilless" Fence is liable to snap in certain weather conditions.

But the Frost is a coil Fence. In Winter, when steel Wire contracts, Frost coils "give" their surplus, instead of snapping like "coilless" Fence.

And in Summer, when the Wire expands, that surplus returns to the Frost coils, instead of sagging and causing the Fence to lose its shape.

And no matter how often contraction or expansion is caused, the Frost Fence always acts the same, like a Spring.

Merely Excuses

Lots of other Wire Fences have a Tension, Curve or Kink, as an excuse for "Give" and "Take." But the number of these "Gives" and "Takes" is limited. They cannot keep it up. It isn't in the Wire or the method.

Both the Frost Field-Erected and the Frost Weave Fence have extra provisions for "Give" and "Take." But no others have it. You simply cannot find another Fence which will retain its shape like the Frost.

Make Our Own Wire

We are the only Fence Makers in Canada who Make and Galvanize Wire exclusively for Fence purposes.

Wire, to give satisfactory service in Canada, should be made especially to fight off the peculiar Canadian climate, which simply knocks the very life out of most Fences. But all Wire is not made with Canadian conditions in view.

The Wire formerly used for the Frost Fence was made in the States. But we had it made especially for us. It gave better satisfaction than most Wire, but we wanted far better.

For that reason we decided to Make and Galvanize our own Wire. So we built a Mill for Wire-making, and another for Galvanizing, and installed the most modern Machinery in use.

Then we obtained the services of one of the most Expert Wire-Makers in America. A man with 25 years of Wire-Making experience back of him.

The new Frost Wire is Annealed so scientifically that it possesses the proper temper for Canadian conditions.

Every inch is of uniform temper, and stronger than any other No. 9 wire.

It will not snap, regardless of peculiar Canadian weather variations.

doctors were in his shaking on him, and as he stood he called his wares. Martha clutched at the wall of the building. She looked over the way at the little store. Its windows were filled with fruit, and an Italian name fluttered on the awning. Then Martha understood. The store had gone to pay her expenses. She turned and hurried away as fast as her trembling limbs would take her.

"It will hurt him so to have me find out," she thought, and the tears trickled down her face.

"He's kept a secret from me, and I'll keep one from him," she said to herself. "He shan't know that I know."

That night when Eben came in, chilled and weary, Martha asked cheerfully the old question:

"How's business?"

"Better'n ever, Marthy," answered Eben.

A Lack of Language.

A lamentable gap in the English language and indeed in all languages has been discovered by a correspondent of The London Lancet. "Why," asks M. J. Williams, "is there no way of describing smells? You have not described or classified a smell when you have said that it is horrid, and you are just as wide of the mark when you have said another smell is lovely. Consider the parallel of the classification of colors. When you describe a sunset you need not merely say that it is beautiful. You can go further and say that it is red or yellow or purple, as the case may be. But supposing you have been face to face with musk for a few minutes and want to describe it to your friends. You will find that outside the province of expletives, you are helpless."

Sail-Bearing Fishes.

Various marine animals possess organs which, raised above the surface, act as sails, by means of which they are propelled along the water. Among these may be mentioned the Portuguese man-of-war and the paper nautilus. Certain fishes, it appears, use the same method of progression, the dorsal fin acting as a sail. Broadsonnet called such fishes Poissons voiliers. And the scientific name Istiophorus (sail bearer), given to a genus of fish, implies a similar belief. In a contribution to the zoological Jahrbuch Louis Dollo claims that other genera are also sail bearers. He suggests also that among the cetaceans the grampus and bottle nosed whale may make a similar use of the dorsal fin.

Rossini's Memory.

The composer of "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" was blessed with a not very retentive memory, especially for names of persons introduced to him, a forgetfulness which was frequently the cause of much merriment whenever Rossini was among company. One day he met Bishop, the English composer. Rossini knew the face well enough and at once greeted him. "Ah, my dear Mr. ——" But he could progress no further. To convince him that he had not forgotten him Rossini commenced whistling Bishop's glee, "When the Wind Blows," a compliment which "the English Mozart" recognized and would as readily have heard as his less musical surname.

Born With Them.

"Mamma," said the little girl, her eyes wide with excitement. "I do believe the minister told a story!" "Why, the idea!" said her mother. "You don't know what you are saying."

"But I do, mamma. I heard papa ask him how long he had worn whiskers, and he said he had worn them all his life."

Plenty of Chin.

"She talks twice as much as the other girls I know." "Yes, she has a double chin."

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Glanford Station, Ont.—“I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of the uterus, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking your medicine. It has also helped other women to whom I have recommended it.”—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ontario.

Gardiner, Me.—“I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months.”—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Maine.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

HIS BUMPS.

The Explanation Given by the Book on Phrenology.

They were newly married and were calling upon one of the friends of the bride who had been particularly pleasant upon the occasion of their wedding. The bridegroom, apropos of nothing, began to talk about phrenology and told how his wife had discovered two very prominent bumps on the back of his head. He was proud of them. So was she, and she passed him around that the host and hostess might feel the bumps and know of their existence. Then she explained:

“My book on phrenology says that they mean good memory and generosity.”

It was evident that she was proud of the facts, and so was he. But the host, being of an inquiring turn of mind, wished to satisfy himself, so he got down a phrenological work from one of his library shelves and after much labor found the bumps on the chart. Turning to the notes, he read, seriously at first, then unsteadily. The bride became suspicious, but she was game and said:

“Read it out loud. Please do!” And the host read:

“These bumps are most frequently found on cats and monkeys.”

Other topics consumed the remainder of the visit, which was brief.—New York Sun.

No Beggars in Copenhagen.

Copenhagen is a city of 500,000 inhabitants. During a week's stay I have seen no seller of matches or boot laces, no gutter merchant, no blind or other afflicted persons about the streets asking for alms—not one single sign of distress due to poverty. I have explored the artisans' quarters by day and late at night. There is not a single spot in the whole of Copenhagen that could be compared even remotely to the slums in our large towns. There are no unemployed hanging about the street corners, no unkempt women standing idly at the doors, no ragged and dirty children playing in the gutter. There are no dirty houses, with dirty or broken windows, mended with bits of paper, and a ragged apron or a torn bedcloth doing duty for a curtain.—Denmark Letter in London Express.

“HEADACHE, WEAKNESS, HEART TROUBLE”

“I Suffered With for Years—Pe-ru-na Cured Me Entirely.”

Miss Albina Chauvin, No. 50 Rue Agnes, St. Henri, Montreal, Can., writes:

“I consider Peruna better than any other remedy, as it cured me when nothing else could. I suffered for years and years with heart trouble, headache and weakness. I never expected to find anything to cure me. I saw one day, in ‘La Presse,’ that Peruna was excellent and I tried it. One bottle produced a change in me and if the price had been $100 a bottle I would have paid it gladly. I have taken six bottles and am entirely cured. Please accept my thanks and best wishes for your Peruna.”

“Please Accept My
Thanks and Best Wishes For Your PE-RU-NA.”

ALBINA CHAUVIN

Many cases of heart trouble are caused by reflex disturbances.

Derangements of the stomach and liver produce symptoms of heart trouble.

Catarrh of the stomach is a very frequent cause of sympathetic heart disease.

Palpitation, shortness of breath and bloating after meals are the most prominent symptoms.

Such a condition of the stomach is also liable to produce headaches of the worst sort.

Medicines that palliate the symptoms will never lead to a cure.

It is the effect which Peruna has upon the stomach, healing the mucous membranes and restoring the natural function of the stomach, that causes Peruna to bring such prompt relief.

The cause of the shock which made Hamilton tremble on Friday night, was a slight convulsion of the earth. So far as known there was no explosion in the city or immediate vicinity. One man, living on Stirton street, was thrown from his bed.
